

The Suffragette

ACTIVITY BOOK

NAME

It was 1903 and equality was naught, so the right to vote is why they fought. Facing hunger strikes and imprisonment once being arrested, these women knew they were being tested.

With their heads held high and a simple solution, together they founded the Women's Social and Political Union. Purple, white and green were their colours, symbolising dignity, purity and hope within others. Never giving in to those in power, their campaign would never stop, no matter the hour - arson, damage, terrorism, and more their fighting only seized come the First World War.

In 1917, many years later, the Commons passed a bill which worked for the greater. Despite the passing years and pride, let's not forget those who died - they put their lives on the line, to fight for a better future, both yours and mine.

Because of them we can voice, because of them we have a choice. Because of them we are included, because of them women are no longer secluded.
